John Paul I Buried After Outdoor Rites

By Henry Tanner

ROME, Oct. 4 (NYT) - Pope John Paul I, the 263d occupant of the throne of St. Peter, was laid to rest today in St. Peter's Basilica after a solemn two-hour Mass concelebrated by 92 red-clad cardinals.

The rites were held outdoors, in St. Peter's Square, rather than inside the church, following a precedent set two months ago for Pope Paul

The vast square was packed with worshipers. Estimates of the crowds ranged as high as a bundred thousand.

Delegates from 101 countries included Mrs. Lillian Carter, the U.S. president's mother.

Mourners Appland

Many of the mourners applauded in farewell at the end of the Mass when 12 chair carriers in morning coats lifted the pope's coffin on their shoulders and carried it slowly into the church and to his final resting place in the crypt below the basilica.

Night fell under a leaden sky as the coffin, escorted by the cardinals and flanked by Swiss Guards in blue, yellow and red uniforms, entered the church.

The rites were led by Cardinal Carlo Confalonieri, the 85-year-old dean of the Sacred College of Cardinals, which will elect a new pope in a secret conclave beginning Oct. 14. The Sisting Choir sang Gregorian hymns and prayers, and the worshipers in the square responded. -

Cardinal Confalonieri in his homily praised the human warmth of the deceased pope, "the appeal of his instinctive goodness, his innate humility, his genuine simplicity."

The Syrian move saved the Christians, but they have proved stubbornly resistant to Syrian attempts to control them.

Stubborn Resistance

The Christian quarter has been without water and electricity for a week. Tuesday the big guns con-stantly bammeriog the city knocked out most of West Beirut's power, plunging it into darkness and cutting all communications with the outside world.

The blackout proved a nightmar-ish backdrop for the battle waged in the air — fiery tracer shells and whistling rockets from Syrian guns criss-crossed the night sky, landing with white bursts of fire in the eastern sector.

Sadat Carries Out Reshuffle of Cabinet

By Christopher S. Wren

CAIRO, Oct. 4 (NYT) - President Anwar Sadat today carried out a major shake-up of his Cabinet as part of his commitment to overhaul his cumbersome government on the threshhold of transition from war to peace.

The reshuffle, Egypt's third in less than a year, left fewer than a dozen holdovers from the Cabinet of former Premier Mamdouh Salem and introduced some unexpected new faces. Mustafa Khalil, 57, a respected politician, had been named only two days ago to replace Mr. Salem and form the new Cabinet in consultation with Mr. Sadat.

At the same time, the armed forces chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Mohammed al-Fahmy, was also designated a presidential adviser, a post carrying oo real authority. His replacement was Maj. Gen. Ahmed Badawy, a career soldier briefly jailed under the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser, who later led the beleaguered 3d Army in the 1973 war with Israel.

The surprise departures of Gen. Gamasy and Gen. Fahmy baffled observers here and prompted some initial rumors about disaffection in Ali, as the new minister of defense and commander in chief of Egypt's peace accords with Israel. The two outgoing generals had a reputation for loyalty to Mr. Sadat and well-placed Cairo sources attributed the shifts to the president's desire to rotate key military posts.

Gen. Ali, a highly decorated 57year-old veteran of desert tank warfare, was now expected to lead the Egyptian delegation to the peace talks with Israel in Washington next week. It was not clear whether Gen. Gamasy, who had been active in earlier negotiations, would also attend.

The portfolio of foreign minister was left conspicuously vacant, presumably to give Mr. Sadat more time to select a successor to Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel, who

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met today for the second time in three days with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, U.S. officials said Mr. Vance also was talking with key members of the Security Council "about lending support to peacemaking efforts."

Mr. Vance also met with Saudi Arabia's foreign minister, Prince Faisal, at the United Nations, and U.S. officials said it was understood that the Saudi government is working "to end the armed confrontation in Beirut."

The Saudi government has con-tributed most of the funds to keep the Syrian troops stationed in Leb-anon, where their original role had been to try to keep peace during fighting between Palestinian-backed Moslems and Christian militiamen.

It was understood that the United States had urged Syria and Israel through diplomatic channels to exercise the fullest possible re-straint in the current deteriorating situation, in which Syrian forces and Maronite Christian militias are blasting at each other with heavy artillery in Beirut.

There was concern that, if Syrian forces cracked down too strongly on the Christian militias, the Israelis, who support the Chris-tians, might intervene with force. This could conceivably impede the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, which grew oot of the Camp David summit meeting.

Chamoun's Tigers and their Phalange allies to shed their raging uniforms, turn over their arms and stay off the streets, no one listened. Eager to avoid more bloody clashes, the Syrians backed off and agreed to let Mr. Sarkis try his hand politically.

Stage Was Set

It was his failure to do so over almost two years that set the stage for the increasingly violent fighting between Mr. Assad's forces and the Maronite Christian street fighters loosely allied under Mr. Chamoun in the Patriotic Front.

Despite repeated attempts, Mr. Sarkis has never persuaded the Christian militias to turn over their abundant supplies of M-16s and AK-47 Kalashnikov assault rifles, 50-caliber machine guns, 106mm recoilless rifles, anti-aircraft artillery, 155mm howitzers and tanks, along with some French-made rockets.

Cleveland Is Cashing In on King Khaled

By Rudy Maxa

CLEVELAND, Oct. 4 (WP) -A few blocks from the medical clinic where Saudi Arabia's King Khaled underwent open-heart surgery is 'PJ's Auto Wash. A new portable sign bills the place as "The King's Car Wash."

"I told the king's staff to 'just consider this your car wash."

Suddenly Cleveland is, in effect, the unofficial capital of Saudi Arabia, and the city is in the grips of Saudi fever. Arabs dressed in Western suits, paying for goods and services in cash, have reoted all available limousines, brought in several more from Washington, and reserved entire floors of hotels.

The king arrived in Cleveland by private jet last Wednesday for cardiovascular tests at the re-nowned Cleveland Clinic, He was greeted by Chip Carter, the president's son.

The surgeon who performed a six-hour open-heart operation yesterday on King Khaled said that procedure west well, but that the king probably will remain hospitalized at least seven weeks, Associated Press reported. The king was listed in satisfacto-ry condition.

U.S., Chinese Discussing Deal For Communication Satellite

By Robert C. Toth

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 - The United States and China have begun preliminary negotiations for the sale and launching of a communication satellite that would pro-vide a Chinese domestic communications network, the Los Angeles Times reported yesterday.

A team of Chinese telecommunications experts will arrive in the United States this week to shop for ground stations and associated equipment for the oetwork.
[The State Department con-

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (WP) — A senior Defense Department offi-A senior Defense Department offi-cial and a Pentagon consultant tes-tified yesterday that the Carter ad-ministration approved the sale of sophisticated drilling technology to the Soviet Union without coming to grips with the most important issue — whether it is in the U.S. na-tional interest to assist Soviet oil and gas development

The undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, Wil-liam Perry, told the Senate Investi-gations Subcommittee that there is no doubt" that the controversial export of a complete plant for making rock drilling bits will give the Soviet Union an enhanced capabili-

He reported that late in August, the Pentagon recommended that export of the plant by Dresser Industries of Dallas be halted pending a review of overall U.S. policy toward Soviet petroleum development.

President Carter on Sept. 6 rejected advice from the Pentagon, the Energy Department and his national security aviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, that the sale be suspended. Siding with the Commerce and State departments, he allowed the export to go forward while he ordered a study, now under way, of the basic U.S. interest involved that troubles for the Soviet Union are benefits to the United States and that Washington should do oothing to alleviate them. An opposing school of thought is that forestalling a future Soviet energy crisis, and therefore easing the worldwide oil shortage, is in U.S. as well as Soviet interest.

John Murphy, senior vice president of Dresser, the exporting firm, told the subcommittee that a French company contacted by the Soviet Union could have provided essentially the same deal if the U.S. companies were ruled out of the running. Mr. Murphy said that the Soviet Union is more active and so-phisticated in deep-well drilling than Mr. Bucy's report to the Pentagoo indicated.

Low-Risk Attacks

The CIA study of the terrorist record in 1977 noted a trend toward low-risk attacks, such as bombings, arson and murder, with a shift away from well-protected targets to more remote ones not at-tacked in the past. U.S. facilities in isolated rural areas, for example, were often targets. Hijackers showed a tendency to use smaller airports as embarkation points.

The federal government, the CIA report conceded, has had considerable difficulty with terrorist groups that are either based in the United States or have organizational links with segments of the population.

However, actions last year by two such groups, Cuban and Croatian, were not as frequent or as serious as those of 1976.

Security Agencies Fear New Palestinian Terror

By Drew Middleton

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (NYT) — Security agencies in the Middle East, Western Europe and the United States fear an intensification of terrorist activity related to the Palestinian issue and directed largely at Egyptian and U.S. political personalinea and economic and government installations.

The CIA, in a report on international terrorism forecast that Pal-estinian extremists will seek to demonstrate their rejection of a po-litical solution of the Arab-Israeli dispute, even if this is accepted by the mainstream of the Palestinian movement.

What is described as "the Haddad wing" of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine is expected to provide most of the terrorist activity in this period following the Camp David summit agreements between Israel and Egypt. The wing was named for Wadi Haddad; who, according to the CIA, reportedly died of natural causes in an East German hospital

According to the CIA and to other nations' security services, there are indications that members of the PFLP and other dissident groups within the Palestine Liberation Organization, the parent group, are seeking to unseat Yasser Arafat and to replace him with a more aggressive leader who would endorse a campaign of international terrorism.

Activity Disavowed

Since 1973 the PLO has disaowled such activity outside the Middle East, but it has instigated and taken credit for attacks in Israel and Israeli-occupied territories.

The CIA report noted that "deelopments seen by the Palestinians as contrary to their interests could induce even more moderate groups such as Fatah, to resume terrorist activity outside of Israel." The agency report, released in

But while the opposition agreed to participate in the negotiations only after being reassured by U.S. officials that the purpose of the mediation was to accelerate Gen. Somoza's departure, the country's highly popular leftist guerrillas, known as the Sandinista National Liberation Front, continue their preparations for a new military ofsive against the regime.

Talking to reporters in Costa Rica, a Sandinista leader, Victor Manuel Tirado, said that the rebels would have more sophisticated weapons for their next offensive.

The last offensive, which began Ang. 22 when the guerrillas seized 1,500 hostages in the National Palace and was followed by popular insurrections in five cities Sept. 9, was finally put down by the superi-or firepower of the 7,500 troops of the National Guard. Most of the young rebels were trying to fight off aircraft and tanks with pistols and hunting rifles.

Support for Guerrillas

Since then, however, the San-dinista guerrillas, who insist that they are liberation fighters and not Marxist terrorists, are believed to have received monetary support from political groups in Latin ca and Western Europe. Brigades of volunteers are also being formed in Panama and Venezuela to fight alongside the guerrillas.

Even more significant, the gov-ernments of Panama, Costa Rica and Venezuela are openly hostile to the Somoza regime and are expect-ed to step up their support for the opposition if the mediation effort fails to secure the president's early resignation.

U.S. officials point ont that the most difficult part of the mediation will be to persuade Gen. Somoza to step down along with his brother and son.

If Congress goes through with what now appears to he its intention of approving this welter of projects, President Carter should not have the slightest qualms about using his veto power extensively, even though Senate majority leader Robert Byrd. D-W.Va., has said he would try to override a veto of the public-works bill. Mr. Carter will need to explain his actions with some care - considerahly more than he exercised in explaining the nuclear-carrier veto -- because each of these hundreds of projects has its own core of supporters. But the mood of the country is likely to he with him and not with those in Congress who are filling the barrel as if there were no tomorrow, marked the beginning of a truly new year for Jews the world over. The nation of Israel, to which nearly all of them are bound in blood or conscience, stands within reach of peace with its most formidable neighbor.

Some Vows for Rosh Hashana

After four costly battles in a war of 30 years, the dream of acceptance on Biblical soil seems finally attainable. After a brutal half century of nationalistic striving. Zionism is to he allowed to take root beside an old enemy. Even in the momentous history of the Jewish people, this promises to be a momentous new year.

But roots give no assurance of flowers. Peace with one far-sighted but mortal Eygptian leader will not alone guarantee Israel's security. For the moment, and understandably, the Israelis are focusing their energies on the coming treaty with President Sadat and celebrating his break with the Arabs who refused to join him in negotiations. But in signing the Camp David accords and offering to exchange their Sinai settlements for peace, the Israelis have laid the basis for an even more dramatic - and difficult - process of accommodation on other fronts.

Most significantly, they have extended to their Palestinian rivals a process for reconciliation and a home in the West Bank that spoken.

It is in Israel's interest to encourage the idea that it will one day trade even the settlements in the Biblical sands of the West Bank for the full and final acceptance of the Zionist state, As Jews know well from their own long history, whatever can be achieved needs first to be defined as possible. And as the Israelis will be the first to admit, thinking back only to their last new year holiday, they had not thought it possible that any Arab leader would in this generation grant them face-to-face negotiation, formal state-to-state recognition and an undiluted peace. In less than a single year, their worst fears and insecurities have been transmuted almost into trust of the man who attacked them by surprise on Yom Kippur five years ago. It is the diplomacy of atonement and forgiveness that is succeeding at this season and peoples everywhere should be inspired to include it in their new year vows, whenever they may be

Syria's Credibility and Lebanon

Many observers take the view that the present inconclusive situation in Lehanon is gradually undermining the credibility of the Syrian regime and that sooner or later it would be obliged either to crush the (rightist Christian) militias or to extricate its forces from Lebanon altogether. If it has decided on the former course, the present moment might seem as opportune as any, since Israel would not want to jeopardize the great prize of an Egyptian-Israeli treaty, now virtually within its grasp, hy emharking on an all-out war against Syria in support of its Lebanese Christian proteges.

On the other hand, it must be doubted whether, if he had decided on the final crunch in Lebanon. President Assad would have gone off as scheduled on Sunday on a two-week visit to East Germany and the Scviet Union. . . However, the two sides have heen set on a collision course for months now and it is perhaps not very important which of them chose this moment to escalate the fighting. What is clear is that the militias have succeeded in destroying Syria's credibility as a neutral deterrent force and in forcing it to adopt an all-out helligerent role. . .

The situation is also extremely dangerous for the Middle East at large and for the world, since if Israel does intervene directly then President Sadat may find it impossible to implement the Camp David agreement. The international community cannot afford to ignore what is happening, either from a humanitarian point of view or from that of self-interest.

President Carter's suggestion last week of an international conference was unrealistic. if only hecause Syria would certainly not accept Israel's participation. But some forum for genuine negotiations between the antagonists is clearly needed. . — From the Times (Landon).

Euphoria Over China?

The present euphoria at the prospect of the Chinese placing huge orders abroad for the purchase of capital equipment is bound to give way to a good deal of disappointment. . . So inevitably scepticism grows as to how large a program of industrialization China can manage and how fast. The Chinese leadership's own assessment of how rapidly it can move will only show up in the actual signing of contracts. At the moment, it would seem that the Chinese are being more cautious in practice than the grandiose plans they have announced would suggest. . . There is no doubting the impatience of the leadership for fast results or their determination to achieve these through a rapid program of industrial modernization.

Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, twice disgraced and over 70, clearly sees this as his last chance to transform China according to his own vision. The Chinese people. after decades of wretched hardship, are also impatient for the higher living standards that seem to lie at the end of Teng's plans. The ohstacles, however, are formidable. . . Officials, who have seen too many changes of leadership for their liking, are timid about taking decisions.

In such a massive development, there are immense problems of coordination and there are problems in financing the local costs of the plan and of finding the necessary foreign exchange. . . Restraint is called for both hy suppliers of equipment as it is hy the Chinese in refraining from drawing up excessively ahitious plans.

Early in the day, he was driven to his prepared niche in the mountains, somewhat below the position of Archduke Ferdinand and near the spot of Kaiser Wilhelm II. The little goal-like animals were then made to run by the prepared positions, and the Czar tallyed a very creditable nine kills, even though it was his first time taking part in a chamois drive. After the evening repast terminated, some time was spent at hilliards before a general move was made for hed.

Human Rights and Sanctions

By Jonathan Power

ONDON — Human rights — of a kind — have been around for a long time. A citizen of ancient Rome, if condemned to die, could choose to be beheaded. A noncitizen would be tortured to death. In more recent times, England's Bill of Rights in 1689, the American Declaration of Independence in 1776. and the French Declaration of the Rights of Man in 1789 have determined many of our modern institutions. In postwar history, we can probably pinpoint two watersbeds. The first was the Universal Declaration of Human Rights codified under the influence of its presiding genius, Eleanor Roosevelt. The second was the determination of a U.S. president to make the issue one of the center points of his pres-

The question now is, having launched what on balance has hen a useful crusade, what should President Carter do next to shape it and e it a more productive orientauon? First and foremost, the coordination with Europe must be stepped up. If Carter had listened to Helmut Schmidt and Valery Giscard d'Estaing, be would never have made the mistake of a full frontal human rights confrontation with the Soviet Union, a confrontation that has in effect decreased the buman rights enjoyed hy Russians and East Europeans. In retrospect. we can see that Henry Kissinger's quiet approach was the more suc-

But wby not such a committee to coordinate other aspects of the rights strategy, not least the application of rights criteria to arms transfers, an area of appalling shortcomings?

.Arena

Another arena of success has been the United Nations, for so under-utilized and undermined by U.S. diplomacy. Andy Young. Cy Vance, and Jimmy Carter, have changed all that. But it is important that this autumn should see an acceleration of their efforts at the General Assembly to have more regular meetings of the UN Human Rights Commission and the appointment of a UN high commissioner on human rights who can speak out against violations. In his new book. "Human Rights," the British foreign secretary. David Owen, suggests the UN institutions should be modeled on the Europe-an Commission on Human Rights. which together with the European Court of Human Rights provide for action either by an individual against the state or by one state against another.

Yet it is all too easy, as Dwight Morrow said 50 years ago. "to judge ourselves hy our motives and others by their actions." Banging the table at the Human Rights iar one among newspapers, of a head-on clash between management and labor unions. The mana-gers of The Times, having endured months of unofficial strikes and wain attempts to modernize their technology, have told the unions that unless they reach agreements on critical issues — including an undertaking of continuous production — they will close the newspaper down on Nov. 30. At first, the ultimature was accounted to be part ultimatum was assumed to be part of the usual rhetoric of bargaining: But the unions still cannot agree, the printers and journalists have been given formal notice, and the management really seems serious.

Shift

Behind this showdown there are clear signs of a new and more de-tached kind of newspaper owner-ship; and the battle in The Times is part of a general shift in the charac-ter of British newspapers. Until about 15 years ago, most London newspapers were owned by dominating proprietors, who ran them primarily because they enjoyed their political influence. Lord Beaverbrook ran the Daily Express as an eccentric personal crusade to revive the dwindling empire; Lord Rothermere ran the Daily Mail as a scource of the Socialists: Lord Asscourge of the Socialists; Lord Astor owned The Times rather as if it were a historic country house, or an aristocratic foundation.

Now all has changed, Lord Beaverbrook's heir sold his group to a propery-and-shipping conglom-erate; Lord Rothermere's heir is making a new fortune in oil. The popular papers are fighting for their lives against the Australian intruder, Rupert Murdoch, who has successfully proved that the average British reader is much less intelligent than anyone dare think. Only the paper, The Daily Telegraph, owned privately by Lord Hartwell and his family, still partly conforms to the old picture of the press barons.

ant groups are now controlled from outside the country. The new Lord Rothermere now directs his papers from Paris, where he is a tax exile.

L ONDON — While the three New York newspapers are into their eighth week of the strike, a more fundamental threat is facing one of the world's oldest and more celebrated newspapers, The Times of London. The story throws a sharp light on the problems of newspaper ownership and conglomerate companies.

The immediate threat is a familiar one among newspapers, of a

The Times is now part of a major industrial group which includes a travel company, several publishers, and above all a lucrative share of oil in the North Sea; its shrewd managers regard the newspapers as just another subsidiary. As for Kenneth Thomson, he is believed to be exasperated both by the union troubles of The Times, and by the rather lordly and patronizing attitude of its managers and edi-tors, presiding over their stately lunches in Printing House Square. To put it badly, Thomson seems to think that The Times hardly deserves to survive in its present con-dition; and be would not weep to see it go.

His attitude must command some sympathy. The old proprietors, desperately competing to out-do each other, caved in to their la-bor unions after each showdown, and committed their papers to armies of idle workers. The advent of more commercial and detached managers could make newspapers more efficient; and editors more independent. The hullying power of the worst of the old press barons, launching their vendettas and suppressing crucial news, was a humiliation to responsible journal-

Yet ancient newspapers, bowever badly managed or eccentrically edited, can acquire a kind of tribal character which still asserts itself, whatever the whims or tyrannies of ownership; in a real sense they be-gin to belong to their readers. No newspaper in the world has this character more obviously than The Times: For with all its ups and downs, ita periods of partisan reporting, pompous editorials, or suppressions of truth, it has been kept sane and liveley hy its most enviable and envied ingredient the letters to the editor.

From its beginnings, the letters have provided a kind of debating-chamber, an anteroom to Parliament, a source of independent views, reports, scoops, reflections Newspapers have thus become or jokes which are part of the maponents of industrial empires. A French expedition bad established itself there but then was challenged by a British force under Gen. Kitchener, fresh from his victory over the dervishes at Omdurman. London's scarcely veiled threat of war eventually led the French to abandon their position on the Nile and leave it to the British, with much subsequent hitterness against Brzezinski says that the United States and the Soviet Union today are running the risk of the same kind of dangerous confrontation because, as with Britain and France in the late 19th century, we are "two overlapping global military powers pursuing conflicting global policies in a dynamic setting of Third World instability." This supposedly is bound to lead to collisions between a like the transider. sions between us, with the two sides rushing to pre-empt control in some situation of crisis, with an ensuing "spiral of intervention."

"Fashoda is very germaine to our current concerns," Brzezinski says; "at the minimum, at least one Fashoda is to be expected. . The question is. of course, whether in the context of the new nuclear equation an American-Soviet Fashoda will work out as peacefully as the Angle-French one did

It's possible that no one picks it because everyone recognizes that what this Fashoda metaphor fits, if it fits anything, is the 1960s, not the 1970s or 1980s. Brzezinski simply is describing events of the last few years and presenting it as a prediction. Moreover, it is a had prediction, because the lessons of the last few years are the opposite of recent events are the opposite of the one he derives.

During the 1960s, the Americans, the Russians, and even the Chinese all were — or were thought one wants to use the Fashoda image, one would say that Vietnam provided our Fashoda. Not only did all of us arm and aid local forces, but the United States directly intervened, carrying the war to Russia's ally, North Vietnam - officially a nonbelligerent country— bombing its capital, mining its riv-ers and harbors, and even attacking the capital city in the midst of an official visit by the highest officials of the Soviet Union. And the Soviet Union did nothing.

Or one could take the Guban missile crisis as a Fashoda. The Soviet Union had established a posi-tion in Cuba, tried to expand it; the United States confronted them with a threat of war; and they backed down.

Prudence

The first thing demonstrated in these "Fashodas" of the 1960s was the prudence, the avoidance of risk. of the Soviet government. At no time was there a really serious danger that our two countries would come to war. This prudence has never been a consistent characteris-uc of Soviet policy.

Never in its history has the Soviet Union run serious risks of war in power confrontations that did not directly involve its established security interests on its own borders or in its East European zone of postwar control. Ruthless as the Russians have been in crushing uprisings in Eastern Europe or in expanding control of sensitive bor-der areas — as in seizing the Baltic of direct and contiguous security importance to the Soviet Union. It is perfectly possible that this could change in the future. But if Mr. Brzezinski thinks that it will change, he needs more than a flashy historical metaphor to dem-onstrate that this will happen. He should present his evidence. So radical and dangerous a development in Soviet policy would be very big and sobering news.

Common Errors But, of course, what he really is doing is committing the most com-mon of errors in policy planning and forecasting. He is projecting what most impressed him about the events of the recent past into the future, claiming that it represents a trend, without serious analysis of what actually was implied. And what happened during the 1960s not only demonstrated continuing Soviet caution but also, obviously, with Vietnam, produced a traumatic change in U.S. attitudes about Third World military and political interventions. The real lesson of the "Fashodas" of the 1960s lies in how that observed I.S. action I.S. and I.S. action they changed U.S. policy. It's that which will have important effects

For instance, the long thin spice peppers usually wear a little cap from which the stem arises; in the bell peppers, the stem sinks into a sort of recess in the top of the fruit. This may be a simple physical change resulting from the swollen shape of the bell pepper. which in its evolution has engulfed the stem. The difference in shape between the bell pepper and the spice pepper symbolizes a differ-ence in characters. The spice pep-per is a pod containing seeds; the seeds are the main attraction, the pod being no more than a box to hold them (Capsicum means

In the bell pepper, the walls of the pod have thickened and grown much larger, adding fleshiness to the fruit. It is these walls (that is, the swollen pod) which have become the important edible part of the pepper instead of the seeds contained within them; indeed, the seeds and the pulpy white matter to which they adhere are often scraped out and thrown away, for these are the bottest parts, and though heat is what is wanted from a spice, it is oot what is wanted Sorting Out the Perplexing Problem of Peppers The first discoverers of Capsicum (the scientific name is used to avoid confusion with true pepper. which belongs to the genus Piper). may be excused for failing to make much of a distinction between spice and vegetable, for they were meeting both at the same time, and noted only that some were fatter and milder than others.

The references made to these plants by the early Spanish explorers are difficult to match the kinds they had seen with those we know today, but Acosta, in 1604, and Piso, in 1648, seem to have been definitely describing bell peppers, which may also have been the sort of pepper which Garcilasso de la Vega met in Peru, where be reported that the lucas called it rocor

Popular nomenclatural confusion persists to this day. When a French housewife wants to buy a bell pepper, she asks in the market for a powron, but French reference books sniff at this word as an improper vulgarization and refer the reader to the heading of piment. whieb ebucks spice and vegetable peppers into the same bin again, sometimes inextricably. The Spanish sometimes call the bell pepper pimiento, too close for comfort to pimenton, which is the powdered spice. In German, the same word, Paprika, means both the powdered spice and the bell pepper.

A clear distinction, from the gas-tronomic point of view, seems to made only in English between the pepper (vegetable) and the chili (spice); or, rather, in American English, the vernacular of a country familiar with these plants, for Brit-

Capsicum, probably because the pepper, vegetable or spice, disapproves of the English climate -In principle, the bell pepper, being a member of a tropical or subtropical family, ought not to be at home in North America, but though it can be raised profitably by commercial growers only in the southern part of the United States, home growers can take a chance on it over much of that country. A common Italian dish provides an opportunity for patriotic display: It is composed of green peppers, red tomatoes and white onions, the colors of the Italian flag, and is known as saluto alla

bandiera — flag saute. *Warerley Roat

U.S. Inflation Body Sees Acceleration

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (Reuters) — This year's U.S. inflation rate has clearly accelerated from the previous two years, and should show an increase on about a percentage point over 1977, the Council on Wage and Price Stability said today.

In the second of its periodic re-ports on inflation, the council said some of the factors involved in this year's surge are past, but "there re-mains a good deal of uncertainty particularly about food prices."

Consumer prices rose 6.8 percent in 1977, thus the council's inflation outlook for this year was in line with the projections of an 8 percent increase this year by administration inflation counselor Robert Strauss.

The council had said in its initial report on inflation last May that the underlying rate seemed to be stuck at a plateau with little likelihood of increasing or receding. But the latest report said the underlying rate has moved up this year to an annual rate of 7 percent from 6 percent in 1976 and 1977. The latest analysis said the worsening of inflation this year has been concentrated in food and housing. The food price outlook has improved, the council said, but prices at the whoselale level have shown an acceleration also. The analysis said even excluding food prices, wholesale prices have been running up at an annual rate of over 8 percent this year compared with 5.5 percent in 1976 and 1977. The analysis said the current increases in prices of finished goods. both intermediate and crude mate-rials, excluding food, "will put more pressure on the prices of finished goods later this year."

The council said "a pattern of widespread acceleration is evident in most of the major categories of industrial commodities," with further inflationary pressures coming from labor costs, which have grown

8.7 percent over the last 12 months and from what the report labeled as

"the productivity collapse." The council said the recent slowdown in productivity growth has been concentrated in construction. mining and ntilines.

It said much of the productivity collapse in mining and utilities can be blamed on social legislation But the trend in construction, which accounts for about half the overall decline in productivity growth in the last year or so, "is more of an enigma," the council

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (WP) - It had the look of a sober husiness conference but the feel and ring of

In what was billed as a part teach-in, part political blitz, 130 representatives of business, government and labor met here yesterday to draw attention to an issue that has been remarkable in its singular ability to put people to sleep - the U.S. slowdown in productivity.

The point of the two-day confercace is to warn to at the U.S. can no longer afford to slough the problem off, that without a concerted effort to improve productivity, the United States stands both to suffer continned inflation and to lose what competitive edge it still has in world markets. The speakers' message was as urgent and alarmist as any clarion call to arms or action. The United States, they said, has to figure out poorty not only in relation to its again how to work efficiently.

"Productivity is a terrible problem for this nation," said Robert Strauss, President Carter's special assistant for both inflation and trade policy and the keynote speaker at yesterday's conference hincheon. "It is a difficult and debilitating problem. The time has come we all are in accord that we must face

The figures on what is happening to productivity are indeed disturbing — and were quoted by almost every speaker at some point or another. They show that in the past decade. U.S. productivity gains have slowed to only half what they were during the previous 20-year period (1.6 percent per year increase versus 3.2 percent). In the past four quarters, the gains have averaged less than one percent, But the United States is doing

 A slackening in the introduction and development of new tech-However, in what was generally regarded as the most impressive talk of the day, Barry Bosworth, head of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, de-bunked most of these explanations as hardly significant enough to explain the severity of the current productivity decline.

As critical as the slowdown has been, there is no national program to address it. The National Center for Productivity and the Quality of Working Life, chartered in 1971 to keep at least some discussion going on the subject, went out of business four days ago.

The thrust of the conference was summarized by Jackson Grayson, chairman of the year-old American Productivity Center in Houston and who, along with Business Week magazine, organized the meeting "Productivity must be put on the national agenda," Mr. Grayson said. "We must somehow get the interest, the monvation and the at-

We're welcoming a Billionaire.

With over a billion dollars in sales. Pet Incorporated makes quite an addition to our IC Industries family. Together we'll surpass $3 billion in annualized sales this year.

And this year marks IC Industries 10th year of diversification. Just 10 years ago we were a $300 million regional railroad. So what better way could we top off a decade of diversification than by welcoming Pet to our family of companies?

We're welcoming much more than a famous can of evaporated milk, too. The four Pet business groups are a part of virtually every facet of the nation's food system.

From the Milk and Dairy Products Group. Pet supplies fresh milk, evaporated and powdered milk, ice cream, fresh dairy specialties and Sego Pet's Convenience and Specialty Foods Group consists of Pet-Ritz and Downvflake frozen foods. Funsten nuts. Laura Scudder's snack foods and ... Whitman's Chocolates. It's also Old El Paso Mexican foods, Musselman's apple products. Heartland cereals, Gulf Belle shrimp and Reese specialty products.

Pet's Store Environments and Distribution Services Group supplies the retail food business with Hussmann's freezer and refrigerated display cases and also Merchants retrigerated warehouses.

And Pet's Specialty Retailing Group includes Vendome and 9-0-5 party centers. Stuckey's highway stores and Mr. Panel home improvement

All together quite a company. A billion dollars in sales. A diversified manufacturer and distributor of food and other consumer products. And now, a part of the IC Industries family.

If you'd like to know more about IC Industries. write: İC Industries, Inc., European Office, 55, chemin Moise Duboule, CH-1209 Geneva, Switzerland,

THE PEOPLE'S ALMANAC NO. 2

By David Wallechinsky and Irving Wallace. Morrow. Hardcover $19.95, 1416 pp. Bantam. Paperback, $9.95,

Reviewed by Joseph McLellan

THERE is no useful purpose I served in informing me that milk can be pasteurized by keeping it at 161 degrees Fahrenheit for 15 seconds; or that Wild Bill Hickock was originally called "Duck Bill" because of "his long nose and protruding lip"; or that the Dowager Empress of China had nails four inches long on some of her fingers. No purpose, that is, except that of pure entertainment, which is a lofty purpose indeed — made loftier, perhaps by the cherished illusion that in gathering such trivia from Wallace pere and Wallechinsky fils I am learning something.

For those who share the curious idea that time spent acquiring use-idea that time spent acquiring usoless information is somehow more morally uplifting than time spent playing cards or watching old movies on television or lying on a beach, "The People's Almanac No.2," like its predecessor (from which it differs completely in content) and like its cutsin, "The Book of Lists" offers a plentimbe of of Lists," offers a plentitude of richly diverse satisfactions. One may learn, for example, about "a New England composer named Greeler" who set the entire U.S. Constitution, including the pream-ble and Bill of Rights, to music for the American Centennial. And considering that the work would take six hours to perform, the few seconds needed to read about it are probably the best way of getting to know about it. A page later, there is the story of a mob in Erwin, Tenn. that lynched an elephant aamed Mary who had run amok and killed a man, and not long after that we encounter the ingenious William G. Hall of Shrewsbury, England, who committed suicide by boring eight holes in his head with an electric

There are almanacs grimly dedicated to the conveying of useful information, such as the speed of light and the population of Switzer-land. "The People's Almanac No. 2" is not entirely uncontaminated with such material, but it strives nobly and with considerable success to temper such usefulness. The information an pasteurizing milk, for example, is contained not in an article on milk or on pasteurization, where a person of utilitarian motivatioa might find it, but in a short list af things that can be done in 15 seconds.

One thing that can be done in 15 seconds, by simply opening this book at random, is to learn something that you had not known before and that you are happier — if not better — for having learned. For example, (now opening book at random to page 903) Sears Roe-buck sold a 1902-model woodburning stove (presumably cast iron; it weighed 415 pounds) for only $14.95.

The avid reader, appalled at the loss of a single second that might be devoted to soaking up such trivia, will find this compendium a delight even though it is a bit bulky ta carry around for use in odd moments such as waiting for eleva-tors. But it also has long sections for those who like to sit down and take the time to chew and digest some sustained reading. There is, for example, a splendidly miscellaacous 31-page section on human behaviar that includes accounts of half a dozen intriguing experi-ments, a biography of Hermann

Rorschach, a discussion on phreside in the strange habits of some famous people and nearly two pages on the dreams of other famous people more than two pages on the procession of the page of the pag

Zones. There are 31 other sections, dedicated with a similarly random zeal to such subjects as money, history, the universe, love and sex, communications media, lists (naturally), health, Americana, death, unexplained phenomena and ather topics. One section is a collection of essays, including one on how close our society approaches that of Orwell's "1984."

In many ways, the most interesting section of the book is the final-one, which is composed of highly. miscellaneous material sent in by-readers of the first "People's Almanac." These items range from: an extended essay on the deficient cies of the standard typewriter keyboard to a suggestion that rape victims should prosecute their assail-ants for the more easily provable crime of indecent exposure.

Unlike most almanacs, which confine themselves unimaginatively to reality, this one also includes rather detailed biographies of Dr. Victor Frankenstein, Mary Worth Mr. Spock of the starship "Enterprise" and several other "people who never were — yet live" today." They coexist well with the biographies of such figures as David Rice Atchison, who may have been president of the United States for one day (March 4, 1849) be-cause Polk's term had expired and Taylor refused to sworn in on a

Sunday,
This is, in sum, a most heterogeneous and unpredictable volume; certain to contain something to interest almost anyone who reads at all and likely to provide the true lover of serendipity and trivia with years of literary nibbling. It is the kind of book where one happily discovers Thomas Jefferson's recipe for vanilla ice cream on the same page with Toulouse-Lautrec's lemon pie. If it does not tell you the mean temperature of Cap d'And tibes in October (and frankly, I don't know whether it does or note it is likely to make you forget that that's what you were looking for.

LONDON, Oct. 4 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Corp. will televise its most ambitious program ever af music and opera produc-tions this autumn, Humphrey Bur-ton, head of BBC Television's min-sic and arts, has announced.

Productions of "Loheagrin" from Munich, "Die Meistersinger" from Stockhalm, "Dido and Aeneas" from Aix-en-Provence and "Albert Herring" from St. Louis are planned, as well as British pro-ductions of "Cosi Fan Tutte" and The Makropoulos Case.

In addition, the BBC plans a special "opera month" next spring a television relay of several major ballet productions, and in November, a 12-program "Schubert week" to mark the 150th anniversary of the composer's death.

Birmingham will continue its brawling style of hockey to draw the fans in Alabama. Its new coach, John Brophy, a notorious fighter in the defunct Eastern Hockey League, will supply plenty of know-how in that regard. It won't help the Bulls improve their standing, however.

Owner John Bassett signed six underage juniors and the four defensemen among them may see reg-ular action. Paul Henderson is the top returning forward.

And it came just a few weeks after the England team, which plays test matches against other national teams, had given him another slap in the face by denying him the post of vice captain for a coming world tour.

Salary Not Public The Yorkshire committee offered only a meager explanation for its action, suggesting that it wanted to leave Boycott free to concentrate on his strong suit, batting. # William Manchester: American Author

L OS ANGELES — William Manchester, hy his own reckoning an author who prefers to stay out in the cold, came in from it briefly last week and showed he was not merely surviving but thriving after a notoricty that would suffocate others.

For a few months in the mid-1960s — when the Vietnam war seemed eternal quibbles between Manchester and Jaqueline Kennedy enlivened otherwise dreary from pages and escalated into what seemed to be

"Death of a President," published in 1967, was a meticulously detailed, devoted and moving evocation of the five days from John Kennedy's assassination to his burial. But the public, riveted by the controversy, was convinced there had to be something substantial beneath the few details it was fed. In fact, says Manchester, "The worst of it was all the attention it drew. The actual differences of opinion about the manuscript were quite minor, largely the result of misunderstandings — and later the need to save face here and there.

"My relationship with Bohby Kennedy was excellent throughout the whole episode. The problem was that Jackie didn't read the book right away, and got alarmed at things other people told her were in the book. Finally she read it, and we ironed things out fairly quickly. Our relationship is still a pleasant one. But the worst aspect was being hounded by the press. I just wanted to be left alone to write.

From that spotlight. Manchester might have been expected to leap with relief into a less harrowing field, juvenile fiction, say, or light verse. Not at all.

"The Glory and the Dream" followed, a 1.398-page narrative history of the United States from 1932 to 1972 in which, noted one wry reader. Manchester seems not to have overlooked a single day.

An observer's suspicions are correct: Manehester is a far more serious person than his onetime celebrity suggests, and nothing underscores the fact more than his newest work, "American Caesar," a biography of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Problems

"Each book has its own special problems," Manchester said. "With President, it was coming to terms with my own grief. With 'Krupp,' it was the German language, with 'The Glory and the Dream,' it was just sheer size. But with 'American Caesar,' it was the character of the man himself. I finally came to think that maybe Mac-Arthur never really wanted to be under-

What MacArthur wanted - and got was respect, even reverence. But he didn't get love; even those closest to him often har-bored disdain and derision. Manchester himself believed the worst as he began to explore the psyche of his paradoxical sub-ject, but the author's long view is more sanie, even though he never developed affection for the man:

"Throughout his life, MacArthur was a thoroughly Victorian man, hut born toward the end of the Victorian era in America. In 1918, at the end of World War I, authority still had a pretty good record, so he was regarded as a hero. But by World War II, authority was beginning to be a hit suspect. And now, of course, excellence itself is un-

"But MacArthur was the same man, paradoxical though he was, from first to last, It was the world that grew away from his type." In summary. Manchester applies De Tocqueville's hrilliant evaluation of Napoleon: "He was as great as man can be without virtue, and he was as wise as a man can be without modesty."

Defense Mechanism

For all that the furor over "Death of a President" was an ordeal to get through. Manehester talks of it easily today — in part because he does have his own defense mech-

"I tend to escape into the past. My study is in the library at Wesleyan University [where he has been writer-in-residence since 1955], and sometimes I wander into the stacks and pick up a bound volume of, say, the London Times from the early 1800s, and just lose myself in reading about historical events in the actual newspaper accounts of

"I try to carry this sense of actuality, the small details that give readers the sense of being right at the scene of events, into my historical writing. Essentially, it's a technique of fiction — like characterization, si-lent transition, so forth — that a number of excellent writers are now applying to nonfiction. I'm criticized sometimes for meluding a lot of so-called trivia in my work, but that's the kind of detail I use deliberately to place readers at the scene. Strangely, writers of fiction are praised for using detail that way.

"It was John Kennedy who influenced me to stop writing fiction — I had published four novels — and start working with historical reality. He said that in his opinion the novel was a dying art form, because reality was already beginning to outstrip the novel-ist's imagination." Manchester trails off for a long moment and lets the irony of those words from that man create an odd resonance in the room.

"But I do escape into history. I'm a rather solitary, lonely person, and writing, especially something as involving and long-term as a book on history, is lonely work. It takes some getting used to, to defer your rewards—the pats on the back, the parties, the good reviews when you finally produce a book."

Still, he admits he loves "to be able to back the moments and cover I were the received."

pick the moments and scenes I want to revisit. And although my stamina isn't what it used to be, I can still work so intensely that I don't even look out my window and notice the time. Often, my wife has to phone me to remind me it's time to quit and come home for dinner."

Manchester staves off post-major work depression by making sure he has something "to keep myself moving." In view of his successes with major world figures, would be consider tackling another such subject -

Richard Nixon, say?

"Certainly not," says Manchester with a cool smile, "Robert Haldeman approached me to ask if I would write his memoirs and, of course, I don't do that sort of thing. I told his agent that Haldeman's was the second from the last I would do,"

PEOPLE: Gulystream Swing. Has Had Enough Gulfstream Swimmer

Stella Taylor's rematch with the Gulfstream ended in failure. Aides pulled her from the water less than 20 miles from the Florida coast, ending her second attempt to become the first person to swim from the Bahamas to Florida. The relentless ocean currents, poisonous man-of-war stings, several close encouters with man-eating sharks and severe facial swelling overwhelmed Miss Taylor after a 51-bour effort. Miss Taylor, who twice conquered the English Channel, entered the waters off Orange Cay, near Bimini, at 10:41 a.m. Sunday and was pulled from the water at about 1:41 p.m. Tuesday. It was, however, an unprecedented athletic effort, surpassing by 9 ½ hours the swim Diana Nyad attempted from Cuba to Florida earlier this summer, and surpassing Miss Taylor's previous effort to swim from the Bahamas to Florida by 19 ½ hours. Attendants on the lead boat armed with rifles and "bang sticke" and speek with a and "bang sticks" - a spear with a contact-exploding projectile in its nose — fought sharks away from Miss Taylor at least three times Monday. She took refuge on the lead boat's dive platform or an attending surfboard each time. Her safety divers killed a five-foot shark that began circling the swimmer only six feet away Monday morn-

Christo, the man who curtained a mountain gorge in Colorado and draped 24 miles of horizon near San Francisco, is wrapping up a new project. Christo is carpeting three miles of Kansas City sidwalks in shimmering orange-yellow fab-ric. Seventy helpers recruited by the Bulgarian-born artist began laying down the nylon fabric on the jogger-favored, dog-walker-pre-ferred pathways of Loose Park here Monday. The three-day, 136,000-square-feet job, duhbed "The Wrapped Walk Ways," will call people's attention to their feet and the way they walk, says Christo, 43. "I hope when it is done the public will walk on it," he said, explaining that the resulting folds and creases would be part of the work. The Wrapped Walk Ways project is the latest in a series of artistic adventures for Christo. In 1971 and 1972, he created "Valley Curtain," a fabric suspended between two mountains near Rifle, Colo, His U.S. Bicentennial work, "Running Fence," was 24 miles of fabric 18 feet tall, running through parts of Sonoma and Marin counties north of San Francisco. The $100,000 cost of the Walks project is pale compared to his two most-celebrated works. He says Fence cost $3 million, Valley Curtain about $850,000. To raise the money for "Walk Ways," Christo said be prepared drawings of the project and sold them in advance to art collectors and dealers. The "Walk Ways" will remain for about two weeks, he said.

In San Francisco, a federal judge has made it very plain to Irish Sweepstakes winner Frank McNulty that he must settle with the Internal Revenue Service before he can be released from prison. MeNulty appeared before U.S. District Judge Alfonso Zirpoli for a contempt hearing because of his re-fusal to pay taxes on the $128,410 he won in 1973. McNulty was sentenced to five years in federal prison after rejecting the IRS demand for taxes. He would have been eligi-ble for parole this week without the contempt charge. McNulty, in his 60s, said last week in a jail inter-view that he would continue to reject the IRS claim. "I don't owe them anything."

For Australian teacher Richard Deakins, only the best was good enough, — fine paintings, silverware and oriental carpets from London's smartest stores adorned his four-room apartment. But his patronage was not the kind the stores encourage. He stole the lot. Deakin, 33, appeared in court Tuesday charged with shoplifting I,100 items valued at more than £90,000 (about $180,000). He was jailed for three years and ordered to pay £2,000 court costs. Among the articles crammed into his apart-ment were a print by Picasso, a painting by William Blake, two icons, two color television sets, two hi-fi units and 40 cashmere sweaters. "I just walk in and take them. It is really easy," he was quoted as telling police.
